

GRAVE MISTAKES THAT COST A LATTE

Convenience...we get it, it's worth paying for sometimes. But are your daily habits in line with your financial goals for the future? Do we cruise through the local coffee shop drive thru to save time or just because we LOVE all the delicious flavors...or perhaps both?

What if I told you that you can make that exact same coffee at home, would you consider it? What if it meant you could save over $1,000 in just one year? You could save time (no drive thru), money, and be better prepared to handle a financial emergency or make a big purchase without using credit and paying interest.

The average latte costs approximately $4.50, if you drink one 5 times a week, that comes to $22.50 per week. If instead, you use a portion to buy your own coffee, cream, and flavoring and transfer $20 a week into a savings account, it has a BIG impact! See below how you can make it happen.

ONE YEAR OF SAVING MAKES A BIG IMPACT!

Large Coffee

- 16 ounces of black coffee
- 2 tablespoons of Half & Half
- 1 tablespoon of your syrup flavoring of choice.

Tips:

Want it less creamy or sweet? Use less!

Want to make it a healthier choice? Switch to fat free half and half and sugar free syrup flavor. Syrups are seriously cheap at stores such as Marshall's or TJ Maxx. They have skinny syrup too.

Want to make it a meal replacement? Add your favorite protein powder instead of a syrup flavor. Trust us, this is good...and filling!
